Today's Suggestion by Ellen Stan.

TAILORED WAIST FOR MORNING.

SEVERAL plain shirt waists such as the one illustrated should be included in every woman's wardrobe. The new waists are now developed in goods that match in color the skirt with which they are worn. They are usually of an entirely different material, thus carrying out the vogue for the combination of different fabrics. The plain tailored paper who desires to secure this pattern may do so by sending 10 cents to this office. Give the number, 4378, state size desired and write the full address plainly. The pattern will be forwarded promptly by mail.

The New Turban
It rivals the huge hats.
Is jammed sullenly down over the head.

It is not nearly so "bouffant" as in the spring.

The size of the turban is now demonstrated by the crown.

Plush, velvet, fur and silk are all utilized for these crowns.

Some of the turbans aspire to round brims made of drawn silk; such brims generally have a beading edge of fur or plush.

These are much less grotesque than the brimless toques with the gigantic bulging crown, and are likely to enjoy great popularity this winter.

About Gloves

Few long gloves will be seen. Short gloves are now worn even to receptions.

The one-button glove is more modish than the two.

Fashionable women have long tried to taboo white and black gloves.

Gray gloves are now enjoying much favor abroad, and biscuit colored suede is popular.

There is a growing tendency to have the gloves match the gown in evening wear.

Heavy cape gloves with red stitching have a mannish effect that goes well with the tailor-made.

The Hood

It's now a cult.

All women are wearing it.

For evening wear it is a boon.

For few women know how to adjust the scarf.

It takes us back to the lost great days of France.

The days of gilded coaches, of masks and Sedan chairs.

Very soft taffeta is being used more than any other material in its construction.

A wide puff of cream net bordered by tiny rosebuds and a single or double frill of lace or chiffon is considered a good finish for this.

The evening hood is doubtless responsible for the bonnets which are being used so extensively in motor wear; these bonnets are of the Quaker, coal-scuttle and poke types, and though naturally made of more robust materials, they are hardly less charming.

The Modern Hat Pin

It is huge.

And very costly.

It hobnobs with the big hat.

And looks as though made by an armorer.

Many of them possess formidable looking knobs.

These knobs are often of beaten gold, or silver, or both.

They are studded with amethysts or semi-precious stones in a shade which echoes the color of the hat.

As these Broddingnagian pins make the small hat look ungainly, those designed for turbans are less aggressive in appearance.

Fashion's Fads

Hat pins are huge and costly.

Fancy waistcoats for men are popular.

Plain and chased gold bracelets are popular.

No end of braid is used on fashionable gowns.

The appreciation of soutache is greater than ever.

Fur hats are very pretty in new shapes and styles.

Coats are long and they never were of more graceful cut.

A great deal of swansdown is used to trim the black hats.

The belt-and-bag set is one of the fancies of the season.

Plaited ribbon trimmings appear on the directoria coats.

Gold tinsel is much employed on evening and dinner gowns.

The colored net waistcoat is one of the novelties of the day.

Dyed in every available tint, the ostrich plume still holds away.

Black coats and gray, brown coats and blue, are all to have colored collars.

The thraldom of the "touch of black" is more apparent than ever before.

The bracelet is now often substituted for the ring as a symbol of betrothal.

The mourning veil of today, though of crepe, is not heavy, and is not stiff.

Black and white is likely to be an enduring favorite throughout another season.

The great breadth of the crown of the new hats makes the brim appear moderate.

The old-time fashion of slashing cloth sleeves over plain silk ones and finishing the edges with long lines of silk-covered buttons has returned.

Trimming on velvet have a certain degree of novelty and in all cases are effective.

A new boot has patent leather vamps, braided cloth tops, and two-inch Cuban heels.

Some skirts are made with the high empire corselet belt in taffetas, generally in black.

Many blouses are made without collars to accommodate the many becoming neck fixtures.

With elaborate afternoon and evening gowns sleeves that are strapped with the material of the gown over laces are a good deal used.

For actual warmth, the goat skin and opossum coats, lined with cloth, are very successful.

Big pigskin, walrus, or leather auto bags, ten by twelve inches, are seen in the shops.

One of the handsomest coats seen this season was made of broadtail, in directoria style.

Nowadays nearly all women wear jackets, and among the prettiest is the grandfather's frill.

Royal blue, golden brown, mulberry, and maize, are fashionable colors in high-class costumes.

Embroidered dots of various sizes are used in dainty ties. The dots may be white or a color.

Paris has again set the fashion for fall cravats, the material being a corded satin or silk.

Very soft taffeta is being used more than any other material in the construction of the evening hood.

Cashmere de sole is a material that is being employed to a great extent by the smartest dressmakers.

A little touch of white crepe as a turnover at the neck and wrists, is allowed now in the deepest mourning.

Hand-made sterling silver brooches, set with small amethysts, have three pendants set with tiny stones.

Big hats that swoop over the head and seem to weigh their wearers down with their ponderous size are popular.

Pear ropes long enough to go around the neck and tie, are finished at the ends with long pearl bead tassels.

Black, touched with gold, whether embroidery, mousseline, paillettes, cabochons, are much seen for evening wear.

Velvet will be fashionable this season as it is a fabric eminently suited to the clinging directoria style.

The best furrers are using the little tails of the ermine as a trimming to entirely around the ermine wrap.

Many of the hat pins are studded with amethysts, or semi-precious stones in a shade which echoes the color of the hat.

In conventional mourning the most used materials are dull Hessian and cashmere de sole, the new silk cashmere.

One of the pretty long ties of checked silk, with tasselled ends, which may be in any color adds much to plain waist.

The chic Parisienne is now ordering high-button, velvet topped, with kid step and back for her dressy afternoon shoe.

Many of the new coats show the Napoleonic collar, embroidered in gold with cuffs to match, and the inevitable plisse muslin or lace jabot.

The vogue of the long coat and the simultaneous waning of the petticoat usefulness are compensatory features of the present-day styles.

Womankind Is Cape Mad

No longer can the skulking villain's grand opera clasp exclusiveness in taste for cloaks. Nowadays all the world loves a cape and there are endless changes rung on this dramatic garment.

Young society women in the thirst for cape novelties, have extended their search from "Greenland," a mountain to India's coral strand, and have implored each period for new yield in the way of cloaks. Consequently, in this year's wraps, we have represented copies of the cape worn by a functionary of the Chinese court, each of the drab cape worn by the 18th Shakeress, facsimiles of all sorts of braided and bullioned military cap repetitions of the occult folds worn by the Arab sheik, and adaptations of pouchos. In fact, "Sartor Resartus" might now be condensed, as far as womankind is concerned to a study capes.

The latest recruit to the ranks of these capes is the directoria cape, which comes as part and parcel of the directoria suit, and is the very latest note in things "directwar."

Sometimes, the cape is merely suggested by the winglike pieces which trail from the shoulders.
